

WHEN You fry fish or oysters in Cottolene they will not be greasy. Always have the skillet or frying pan cold when the Cottolene is put in. Remember that Cottolene heats to the cooking point sooner than lard and that it must not be allowed to burn.

COTTOLENE when rightly used, never imparts to food any disagreeable greasy odor or flavor. For pastry or any shortening purpose, but $\frac{2}{3}$ the quantity that was formerly used of lard, is necessary, if Cottolene is used.

Look for the trade-mark "Cottolene" and also the head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin.

Came to His Rescue.

In the smoking room at the club the low murmur of a man's voice came soothingly to the ears of his listeners.

"It was a most embarrassing predicament," the voice went on. "She was such a lovely girl, and I had no idea it was so late. I stood there debating with myself, and just then—"

A shudder, which the speaker tried in vain to suppress, shook his frame violently.

"—her father came down stairs and helped me out."

Save for the slow and measured rhythm of popping corks the silence which followed was expressive in its intensity.—New York World.

How Hoof Beats are Imitated.

In these days of war plays and stage realism the sound of hoof beats is worked into pretty nearly every melodrama. Very few people know how the effect is produced, and very few, too, could make the noise right even if they had the apparatus. It takes quite a lot of practice to be a good "horse," as it is called. The necessary outfit consists of a table, on which is a long marble slab covered with rubber graduated from an inch thick down to the thinness of a piece of paper. The operator has strapped to each hand half a coconut shell, on the edge of which is fastened a horseshoe. He starts in pounding them on the thick rubber, to imitate hoof beats in the distance, and gradually works along to the thin part as they are supposed to come nearer, and finally ends up with a clatter on the bare stone as the horse is pulled up just outside the scene.

TO MAN AND HELPER.

THE MEANING OF A FAMILIAR ITEM WELL KNOWN TO WOMEN.

How Sam Patched the Wall Paper and Fan Acted as Helper—Adam and His Agricultural Pursuits in the Garden of Eden Painted by a Modern Eve.

That too familiar item on our plumber's bills, "To man and helper," is expressive of so much in our daily domestic relations that one almost forgives the plumber the gift of the phrase.

"I'll patch up that paper on the wall; you leave it," says Sam. And then Sam appears on a day when you are in the thick of some particularly absorbing household task and he says: "I've come up early to mend that paper, and if you'll just make some paste for me, please, I'll go at it." You sigh, but do it cheerfully, thinking, if it is early in your married life, that that will be all. Presently, however, there is a demand for rags, stepladder, pail and whisk broom. These also you get out and return to your work.

"Ew," calls Sam, "where have you hidden my brush? It was in the toolbox right in the left hand corner, and it is gone. Some one must have taken it." Again you leave your task and go up stairs or down stairs to the place whence cometh the plaint and behold the brush a little to the northeast perchance, but quite in the visible neighborhood of that little left hand corner. Without even a blush of shame he takes it, and you return to your own work. You have barely begun again, when Sam appears at the door: "Where can I find a box the right size to set on the stairs, so that I can put some boards across on which to stand the stepladder?"

You think a minute, and you know that the only box available is one filled with odds and ends of needful kitchen things, but you resignedly lay them all out on the floor and give Sam the box, catching at the same moment a look which reveals that he is about to ask you for the boards. There are only two long boards on the premises, and those form a walk in the backyard. Still they can be taken up, and they are—but it entails rigorous brushing and cleansing.

Then for a time Sam vanishes, and all is serene, but not for long. There are a clatter of boards and notes of masculine trouble, which you ignore, until, finding that it is not a day for taking hints, Sam calls again, "Fan, will you please come and steady this thing, or I'll break my neck." Of course you go, and of course you find that he has not already broken it. You get odds and ends of things together to even up and strengthen his rickety scaffolding, and then you sit on a step with your head up between the boards to steady the ladder, except when you vary it by handing a patty rag, or a brush, or a match for his pipe. Then is the time you say, "To man and helper, three hours," and get your revenge, for Sam really sees the point.

Now, it is a strange thing that it is always "man and helper." If a woman undertakes anything, as a rule she goes ahead and gets her things together and does it all by herself, but if a man starts any task not in the line of his ordinary business he will manage to draw to himself the assistance of every woman within call. If it is driving nails, some one must hand the nails to him; a woman would keep them in her pocket or mouth. If he is riveting something, the woman must hold the other hammer on the under side and get in her arm the jar of the stroke. If he even mends his fishrod or ties his flies, she must hold the waxed thread or turn the rod with both hands. I do not see how any married woman can doubt the truth of the Scriptures. Why, to her, the fifteenth and eighteenth verses of the second chapter of Genesis set the seal of truthfulness upon the whole. When man was made and put in the garden of Eden to tend it, he hadn't been there a day before woman had to be made to help him. He couldn't get along alone at all. Fancy him starting out to sow his radish seed and having nobody to ask how far she thought he ought to put the rows apart, so he could put them some other distance. It must have been awful!

Poor Eve! For of all conditions of "helper" that of the gardener's helper is the worst. It is easy to imagine her—her day's work over, as she supposes—planning for a quiet rest upon a cool green bank through the long summer twilight. Along comes Adam, belated in his work, because he had been casting his line from shady nooks into deep, mossy pools, where the speckled trout are lying, and he says to Eve: "My dear, won't you come along with me into the garden? I haven't seen anything of my darling all day. You can sit on a nice soft stone in the path while I work." And poor, easily beguiled by love Eve gets up and follows right along, but, alas, the stone has not changed its nature any more than Adam has. It is not soft, and perhaps that is the reason why Adam does not keep her sitting there long. Good, kind Adam! He wants the rake, and it is down at the house, or maybe it was a bower, and she may as well bring along a measuring line, of which also she may hold one end when she gets back. And then as Adam gets absorbed he absorbs more and more of Eve. She rakes up the weeds which he has hoed out. She holds up the vines which he ties to the trellis. She trots back and forth for the primitive implements, and she smiles, as if she enjoyed it, but it is a weary woman who, as dusk yields to darkness, accompanies Adam to the house, lagging numerous odds and ends. It is her compensation, as she greets Abel and his wife, who are waiting for her, to hear Adam telling his son, "I've done a lot in the garden tonight. I think I'll lay off in the middle of the day tomorrow and take a try for those trout in Cain's meadow brook."

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

New York Stock Market.
New York, Jan. 23.—The operation in stocks to-day, while largely of a professional character, included some fair outside buying for European account and to a less extent purchases by local commission houses. The volume of business was somewhat larger than that of the previous day with the greater part of the trading distributed between four industrial stocks and St. Paul and Western Union. The London cables reported a decidedly more cheerful condition of the public mind regarding the political outlook, so far as the relations with the United States are concerned and higher prices for American securities were followed by arbitrage purchases in this market. The initial prices showed substantial improvement over yesterday's final sales, and, in short order, further gains were established of $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The market closed strong.

Closing stocks were as follows:
Atchafalpa, 14; Adams Express, 145; Baltimore and Ohio, 38; Chesapeake and Ohio, 15; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, 75; Chicago Gas, 64; C. O. C. and St. Louis, 35; Del. Training Hawks.
The instinctive fear of man is the first obstacle to overcome, and, as usual in taming all wild creatures, hunger is the first and foremost means to bring it into subjection. As soon as it will consent to take food from the hand and submit to be handled, stroked and hooded without much struggling or "baiting," as it is termed, the first step is made in its education. Much tact and gentleness, together with perfect quiet, will work wonders in inducing it to feed. The first form of hood used is called a "ruffer hood," being looser in shape and softer and having a larger opening for the beak than the hood proper.

This hood, which every hawk has to be come accustomed to wear at all times, except when flying, is stiff and blocked to fit the head, care being taken that the prominent eyes are not rubbed or injured by imperfect fit, and is gayly ornamented on top with a tuft of scarlet or other colored wool, surmounted with a small bunch of feathers. It is of the first importance in training hawks, and by means of it they can be handled and carried anywhere, among all sorts of sights and scenes that were they not blindfolded, would cause the hawks to bate so violently that injury to themselves would result.—Good Words.

Autocrat of the Kitchen.
Mrs. Faintheart (at front window)—Officer! Policeman—Yes, ma'am. What's wrong, ma'am? Mrs. F.—Nothing's wrong, but wish you'd step into the kitchen tell the cook not to burn the meat she did last night. I'm afraid to.—P. Me Un
